1972 Florence, Forte di Belvedere, Mostra di Henry Moore

More Information

The most significant solo exhibition of Moore's lifetime and one of the largest exhibitions of Moore's work ever held, Mostra di Henry Moore was shown in the Forte di Belvedere, just south of the River Arno in Florence. 2,000 people were at the opening of the exhibition, and 345,000 saw the show over the course of its run.

Moore's biographer, Roger Berthoud, describes the Florence show as a "triumph" and "a kind of apotheosis, with news of its magnificence spreading around the world". The show included some of Moore's largest works on the battlements of the Belvedere, some of which (including Locking Piece and Large Two Forms) were cast in fibreglass for the exhibition..
